Methodist Church

Rev. H. A. Darfee of Burlington occupied the pulpit Sunday morning, preaching from the text John 4:7, giving many beautiful and helpful suggestions on the story of the Samaritan woman at the well. Special emphasis was laid upon the fact that modern plans for social betterment, although all right in themselves, are not to be compared with the method of the Master.

The music was unusually good, especially the solo, "Just as I Am," by W. A. Best.

The evening service was in charge of Mrs. Niles. A very interesting program was rendered and many practical lessons were drawn from the topic, "Loyalty." Rev. E. J. Gale of Trenton, Mo., a former student of P. A., will preach next Sunday.

The subject for Sunday evening will be "Song-bursts of Spiritual Women."

The music for next Sunday will be as follows:—

Organ Voluntary,	Goddard
Bercesse,	Ira B. Wilson
Response,	Grant Thy Blessing
Offertory,	Serenade
Anthem,	O Come, Let Us Sing
Postlude,	Clifford Demarest
	Festival Postlude in C

Pentecostal Church

At the Sunday morning service, Miss Allenspoke from the text found in Matt. 10:24. In the evening, Miss Cushman delivered the message from Matt. 13:15.

Next Sabbath morning, the Rev. Chas. H. Stebbins will preach and the Lord's Supper will be observed.

Advent Church

The text of an earnest sermon, last Sunday morning, by Clarence J. Kearny, was Eccl. 12:1. His remarks were, in part, as follows: Solomon penned these words in his old age, and knew what he was talking about. He had wandered from the Lord, whom he once knew. Neither riches, wisdom nor lust gave the satisfaction he sought. Pliable youth is the time to seek Christ, to be kept from a mispent life. Satan sets snares for every young person; "choose you this day whom ye will serve." Innocent, pure, holy childhood is a model of the kingdom. The Christ-led life is successful; send a wireless message to Father, Son and Company and receive the needed help. We owe it to God to give Him the best of our lives. This preaching service was followed by an excellent testimony meeting.

In the Sunday school the supplemental lesson was an elliptical story of the Jewish nation, to be continued next Sunday. A new class for Juniors was begun last Sunday.

The Loyal Workers' Meeting at 6:45 was led by Harvey Ladd.

The evening service at 6:50 was well attended. The enthusiasm shown in song, prayer and testimony, together with the Christian spirit manifested, comprised a most helpful meeting. Mr. Kearney began a series of Sunday evening topics on New Testament Prayer Meetings, the first being from John 20:19-31.

The subject next Sunday morning will be Christ's Coming the Christian's Hope.

A Queer Election.

In ancient days, it has been averred, the people of Grimsby formed an admirable notion of the wisdom required for corporation honors. The burgesses assembled at the church and selected three of themselves as candidates for the mayoralty. The candidates were conducted, with a bunch of hay tied to each of their backs, to the common pound, in which they were placed blindfolded with a calf, and he whose bunch of hay was the first eaten by the calf was thereupon declared mayor for the ensuing year.—London Answers.

The Avesta.

In its present form the Avesta, the old Zoroastrian scripture, is only a fragment of the original Zoroastrian scriptures. It is generally understood that those ancient scriptures consisted of twenty odd books of a million verses. The destruction of the two original copies, the one at Persepolis, the other at Samarkand, is attributed to Alexander the Great. The Avesta, being only imperfect remnants of these originals, is in compass equal to about one-tenth of our Bible.

Willing to Compromise.

A schoolboy was given a sum to do. When it was done he took it to the teacher, who looked at it and said: "This answer is wrong by 2 cents. Go back to your seat and do it correctly."

"If you please, sir," said the youngster, fishing in his pocket, "I'd rather pay the difference."—Washington Star.

Eye of the Eagle.

Naturalists state that the eagle is able to look at the sun without blinking because it has a thin semi-transparent veil which it can draw instantaneously over its eye and which does not obstruct the sight.

PONDEROUS PLODDERS.

Methods of Elephants in Crossing a River With Steep Banks.

It is a great sight to see a line of elephants crossing a river with steep banks. They go down slowly, striking the ground with their trunks before each step and never making a slip or a miss, although you feel every minute as if they were going to take a header into the water. Then they wade or swim, as the case may be, and they swim beautifully, not hesitating to cross half a mile of deep water if need be.

I must say, however, that the sensation of sitting on the back of a swimming elephant is the reverse of pleasant. You fancy yourself on an enormous barrel which may roll round at any moment and take you under. Besides that, elephants swim so low in the water that you are sure of a wetting, which in India means an excellent chance of fever.

Having crossed the stream, they must climb to the top of the bank, and this is the most peculiar operation of all. Down on their knees they go and with trunk and tusks dig out a foothold for themselves and so step by step work their way to the top, their position being sometimes like that of a fly climbing up a wall. As they reach the top they give a lurch sideways and shoot one leg straight over the bank, then give a lurch to the other side and shoot out the other leg in the same way, which brings them into the position of a boy hanging by his arms from the edge of a roof. Then they come to their knees and finally, with a great scrambling and kicking of their hind legs, bring themselves to level ground again.

In spite of these perilous ascents and descents I never knew an elephant to miss his foothold, although there was a case where one of the herd got stuck in the mud and sank gradually deeper and deeper until only his head and part of his back could be seen. The rajah ordered ten other elephants to be brought up, and they were hitched to the unfortunate animal and by pulling together at the given word brought their bellowing comrade out of the mud with a plomp like the pop of a thousand ton cork.—Times of India.

A WARNING TO POETS.

In Which the Stern Demands of Justice Cause a Vacancy in the Ranks.

All Ragdad was there to hear the caliph pronounce sentence, not because the caliph was a capital pronouncer, but because the prisoner's crime had been heinous. The convicted man was a poet who had written some verse to the caliph's thirty-eighth daughter, thereby meriting a sentence equal to the offense.

Hushed was the courtroom as the poet-prisoner, shaking from fright, was led in. Stately was the caliph as he passed this sentence upon the guilty one:

"Prisoner, under the Editorianean law, which says 'the caliph regrets—great press of available matter—and so forth,' I might sentence you to join your contributions in the wastebasket. Again, I could send you to the galleys, there to wear our your life awaiting release.

"But not! Such trifling punishments are too light for you—you are accustomed to them.

"Prisoner"—here the caliph's face grew grayer and his auditors leaned forward—"prisoner, I sentence you to live, clothe yourself and be happy on the proceeds of jokes you must make and sell. Furthermore, you are not to accept any money other than that derived from the sale of your jokes."

At the close of this terrible pronouncement the prisoner staggered, raised his hand above his head and fell at the caliph's feet—dead.—New York Times.
